POSSIBILITIES FOR THE PRESIDENCY

ly has brought him into the presidential limelight. The only objection which is raised against him is a sectional one, the fact that he comes from the south. Against this, his supporters make this sort of an argument: They point out, first of all, that it is time, nearly 50 years after the close of the war, that sectionalism should cut no figure in the politics of a re-united country. Moreover, they show that he was born in a state which did not leave the union during the war. Kentucky, that for 12 years he lived in a far northern state, Minnesota, that the date of his birth was after the war had begun, and that it was only in his search for a place to locate as a young lawyer that he selected Birmingham, Ala., as his home.

In Wrong Section.
If Underwood were a citizen of a northern, an eastern or a western state, the belief is that he would loom up as one of the strongest candidates in the presidential race, and might easily carry off the prize, especially in the case of a deadlock in the convention. As it is, he is recognized as a powerful factor in the canvases, although, like speaker Clark, his candidacy is in the hands of his friends, and personally he is not putting forth any conspicuous effort for the nomination. Rather, he is devoting himself to the proper conduct and management of the Democratic house to the end that the party may go forth in the coming campaign with a good record of accomplishment and effort.

La Follette's Chances.
Senator La Follette is the only Republican in congress who is now considered a presidential aspirant, unless senator Cummins, who, like La Follette, is a radical progressive, may be so classified. Opponents of president Taft, however, realize that La Follette has the call on the progressives, if Taft is turned down, and Roosevelt declines to run. Some, however, think if Taft is denied a reelection, his friends would prefer to see Cummins get the plum, rather than the Wisconsin senator, and might contrive to bring that about. This, however, is only a remote possibility.

The ultra progressives in congress are out for La Follette, the near progressives have, for the most part, withheld their support thus far, apparently waiting for events. They fear to repudiate Taft and dare not espouse La Follette. The followers of La Follette are conducting a most active and aggressive campaign, perfecting organization in all the states, and carrying on their propaganda in congress. Every move they make is calculated to injure the administration and to boost their own favorite.

No other member of either house as yet looms on the presidential horizon. It is possible other boomlets may spring up during the present session, but there is no evidence of them now. However, strange things sometimes happen in the political game.

"There could be no better medicine than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My children were all sick with whooping cough. One of them was in bed, had a high fever and was coughing up blood. Our doctor gave them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the first dose eased them, and three bottles cured them," says Mrs. R. A. Donaldson, of Lexington, Miss. For sale by all Dealers.

The government, however, is not ready to take immediate possession, but may do so at an early date. Please bear in mind that it is essential for you to pay your water rent within the next thirty days, or else you will have to pay 50c extra per acre before you can use the water for irrigation during the season of 1912.

SANTA CLAUS IS BARRED FROM TOWN

Bellfontaine, O., Ministers Decide to Destroy Myth of Childhood

Bellefontaine, O., Dec. 23.—Bellefontaine is Santa Clausless this year and probably is the only city in the country that will have no Christmas exercises in any of the churches or institutions. The small boy who has attended Sunday school regularly the last weeks, expecting the usual Christmas tree and festivities, was disappointed when the ministers of the city announced through the newspapers that they had decided to abandon the church Santa Claus, the Christmas tree or exercises of any description.

Scatiment against the Santa Claus myth, the high cost of living and the theory that the money should be expended among the poor were among the reasons given by the ministers and others for their actions.

Several of the pastors hired conveyances and made house to house visits to their Sunday school pupils, leaving sacks of candy.
